

Policy Name: Standards of Workplace Behavior

Effective Date: March 1, 2014

Last Review Date: October 1, 2018

Policy Owner: HR - Workplace Expectations and Guidelines

Policy Number: N/A

Overview & Purpose

Whenever people gather together to achieve goals, some rules of conduct are needed to help everyone work together efficiently, effectively, and harmoniously. By accepting employment with us, you have a responsibility to the Company and to your fellow employees to adhere to certain rules of behavior and conduct. The purpose of these rules is not to restrict your rights, but rather to be certain that you understand what conduct is expected and necessary.

Applies To: All U.S. regular employees (full-time, part-time or McKesson temporary employees), except those employees to whom a collective bargaining agreement applies and that agreement contains superseding provisions.

Policy Requirements

Unacceptable Activities

Generally, we expect each person to act in a professional and responsible way at all times. The following list describes examples of impermissible conduct that violate McKesson's standards of conduct. These are only examples, and business units and locations may employ additional policies regarding workplace behavior to meet their unique needs. Violation of the standards of conduct — or any form of disruptive or inappropriate behavior, even if not specifically listed here — may result in disciplinary action, up to and including immediate termination of employment. The nature and severity of the discipline will be determined by the Company, subject to any legal prohibitions or applicable collective bargaining agreement, and typically will reflect the severity of the violation, the employee's past record, and other individual circumstances. Further, nothing in this policy is intended to interfere with any employee's right to engage in lawful activities or speech protected by Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) including, but not limited to, the examples provided in subsections c, m, and n below designed to promote positive workplace interactions. Also, this policy, including subsection j, does not prevent an employee from removing or retaining information about his or her own pay or benefits or terms or conditions of employment, such as the Employee Handbook or any agreements signed by the employees, or any other information which the employee is legally entitled to use.

- a) Violation of any Company rule, guideline, policy or practice.
- b) Intentional, negligent or careless action that endangers the life or safety of another person.
- c) Engaging in harassing or abusive behavior toward a customer, co-worker, supplier, partner, contractor, or business associate where the harassment or abusive behavior is based on a characteristic protected by law or occurs in situations that would not be protected concerted activity under the NLRA. Some types of harassing behavior include, stalking or harassing a co-worker at work for personal reasons, or using abusive language to a customer or business partner because of his or her political or religious beliefs.
- d) Being intoxicated or under the influence of illegal drugs or drugs that are legally obtainable but used for illegal or unauthorized purposes while on Company premises or when representing the Company; using, possessing, distributing, transferring or selling illegal drugs or drugs that are legally obtainable but used for illegal or unauthorized purposes while on Company premises or when representing the Company.
- e) Possession of firearms, weapons, hazardous materials, or explosives on Company property or while on duty, except to the extent such a prohibition is unlawful under applicable law; ©2018 McKesson Corporation. All rights reserved. For Internal Use Only. Standards of Workplace Behavior

- f) Engaging in criminal conduct or acts of violence; making threats of violence toward, or fighting or provoking a fight with, employees, customers, clients, suppliers, visitors to Company property, or other persons with whom the Company has a business relationship.
- g) Threatening, physically intimidating, or unlawfully coercing fellow employees on or off Company premises.
- h) Engaging in an act of sabotage; negligently causing the destruction or damage, in any manner, of Company property, or the property of fellow employees, customers, clients, suppliers, visitors to Company property, or other persons with whom the Company has a business relationship.
- i) Failing or refusing to cooperate in or interfering with a Company investigation, Standards of Workplace Behavior
- j) Theft or unauthorized possession of Company property or the property of fellow employees, customers, clients, suppliers, visitors to Company property, or other persons with whom the Company has a business relationship; unauthorized possession or removal of any Company property, including confidential Company documents, from the premises without prior permission from management, unauthorized use of Company equipment or property for personal reasons; using Company equipment for personal profit, gain or business;
- k) Dishonesty, falsification, or misrepresentation on work records, including but not limited to, applications, expense reports, personnel records, and timecards; lying about sick or personal leave; falsifying a reason for a leave of absence or other data requested by the Company; alteration of Company records or other Company documents; recording the work time of another employee or allowing another employee to record your work time.
- l) Violating one's Employee Agreement; providing confidential or proprietary Company information to competitors; working for a competing business while a Company employee.
- m) Unlawfully defaming a co-worker or customer; fighting with employees, customers, or other third parties in the workplace or on work duties; using obscene or vulgar profanity or abusive language (in a manner not protected by law) in the performance of your duties; engaging in unlawful hate speech; n) Interfering with another employee's ability to do his or her job or to follow Company policy (in a manner not protected by law). For example, continually interrupting a co-worker's work to discuss personal matters, or preventing an employee from reporting behavior that violates a policy, such as sexual harassment.
- o) Excessive absenteeism, tardiness, leaving early, or leaving work without management permission; p) Unauthorized or inappropriate use or disclosure of Protected Health Information.
- q) Conducting Company business at a location that could embarrass the Company if disclosed to the public or make other individuals feel uncomfortable, including but not limited to "adult entertainment" establishments and other venues with sexual undertones.
- r) Willful or negligent non-performance of assigned duties; or
- s) Refusing to perform duties as instructed by a supervisor or manager; deliberately engaging in unprotected conduct related to performance of your duties contrary to Company instructions. Nothing in this policy alters the at-will nature of your employment (unless an employee has a written contract or is covered by a collective bargaining agreement that expressly provides that he or she is not an at will employee); either the employee or the Company may terminate the employment relationship at any time and for any reason, even in the absence of a violation of these rules.

Key Definitions for this Policy:

At-Will Employment: A company can terminate an employee 'for good cause, or bad cause, or no cause at all,' and the employee is also free to terminate their employment with the Company at any time, with or without cause.

National Labor Relations Act: prevents and remedy's unfair labor practices by private sector employers and unions. The NLRB protects the rights of most private-sector employees to join together, with or without a union, to improve their wages and working conditions.

Employee Agreement: signed agreement between the individual and the employer around topics such as maintaining confidentiality, use of company property and post-employment restrictions. Protected Health Information: means information, including genetic information, that:

- 1) Is created or received by a health care Provider, Health Plan or health care Clearinghouse; and
- 2) Relates to the past, present or future physical or mental health or condition of an individual; the provision of health care to an individual; or the past, present or future Payment for the provision of health care to an individual; and
- 3) That identifies the individual or there is a reasonable basis for believing that the information can be used to identify an individual.

Exceptions

Employees to whom a collective bargaining agreement applies and that agreement contains superseding provisions.

Questions and contacts:

HR Support Center at 1-855-Go-McKHR (466-2547).

Related Policies & Content:

At-Will Employment Policy

Anti-Harassment, Non-Discrimination and Non-Retaliation Policy

Signed by:

Cody Chau

4C6A26423D9046F...

Employee Name

7/10/2026

Date

DSFN:Employee ID_X_X_X_X_Eag-AHP.pdf